FUTURE FORUM PAC ANNOUNCES SUPPORT OF YOUNG HOUSE CANDIDATES ACROSS THE NATION

WASHINGTON, DC – Future Forum PAC, the political action arm of House Democrats’ millennial engagement group, today announced it has contributed $50,000 to Democratic House candidates across the nation – the “Future 40.”

“All across America, a new generation of young candidates is stepping up to help move our nation forward,” said Rep. Eric Swalwell, founder and chairman of Future Forum. “Some are veterans who have put their lives on the line for our country; some have served in local, state or national government; some are entrepreneurs who have launched job-creating companies.

“These candidates will be part of a Congress that fights for healthcare for every American, for jobs and taxes that let working families plan brighter futures, and for fairer representation that’s free of the stains of big money and gerrymandered districts. They’ll serve in a Congress that puts nation before party, and that puts a hard check on President Trump’s dangerous policies and erratic behavior.”

"I'm honored to be counted among the Future 40," said Aftab Pureval, a Democrat running in Ohio's 1st Congressional District. "I've said all along that I want to be part of a new generation of leadership, and that's exactly what Future 40 is. We're coming to Washington to do what America needs for jobs, healthcare, education and more."

Future Forum, launched in 2015, is a coalition of young Democratic Members of Congress focused on issues and opportunities for millennials – America's largest, best-educated and most diverse generation. Now numbering 28 members, the group has visited almost 50 U.S. cities from coast to coast, listening to young Americans' needs and concerns: from the student loan debt crisis to the decline of entrepreneurship to dwindling home ownership. These challenges impact the overall health of our economy and cannot be ignored.
